Windows and doors aren't just functional features — they shape how architecture is seen, felt, and lived. For a new generation of Indian architects, fenestration is more than an afterthought. It's a design device in its own right: shaping light, controlling climate, and crafting powerful spatial narratives. With its robust engineering and design-forward systems, Fenesta has become a trusted partner in this process, elevating everything from bold gestures to quiet details through high-performance, low-maintenance solutions. Across materials, styles, and scales, its versatility empowers architects to design with clarity, purpose, and lasting impact. fenesta.com

Nihar Arka, founder of Parallel Projktions Design Studio in Hyderabad, focuses on crafting homes that respond to their environment, aiming to deliver spaces that are both efficient and emotionally engaging. Over the years, Fenesta has been a trusted partner on several of his projects for its ability to deliver wider, clearer views and create a seamless connection between indoor and outdoor spaces, making rooms feel bigger and brighter. As Nihar says, “Fenesta delivers solutions that not only enhance the facade’s character but also align with modern expectations of comfort, clarity, and design continuity.” He also values the brand’s wide range of finishes, colours, and hardware options, which allow for ample customization — along with the fact that Fenesta’s products are automation-ready and compatible with smart locks.

Kolkata-based Manoj Singhal & Associates has long aimed to merge India’s architectural traditions with forward-thinking design. “Our goal has been simple: to create spaces that feel both welcoming and cutting-edge,” says founder Manoj Singhal. That vision, grounded in thoughtful detailing and enduring materials, aligns with Fenesta’s high-performance systems, which the studio uses in expressive, nuanced ways. “Each Fenesta opening becomes a stage for light and landscape,” he describes. In one project, a bold jaali screen with a circular cutout sits over fixed glazing, casting shifting patterns on the floor. Downstairs, aluminium sliders fold open to blur the line between living room and garden. Upstairs, whisper-quiet uPVC tilt-and-turn windows block out the noise and monsoon heat, while their slim frames preserve expansive views. The result is a seamless blend of performance, elegance, and sensory experience.

For over two decades, Internal Affairs Interiors, a multidisciplinary design firm in Kolkata, has been blending soul, sustainability, and storytelling. Founded by Debopur Das, the studio’s philosophy is rooted in sensitivity to nature, material honesty, and emotional resonance. Always seeking products that combine performance, aesthetics, and long-term value, the firm found a natural fit in Fenesta, featured across several bungalow projects in Kolkata as well as in Debopur’s own office. That synergy stems from a shared commitment to thoughtful, high-performing design. “For me, the game-changer has been the shift toward uPVC and high-performance aluminium systems with integrated insulation and soundproofing — something Fenesta has championed in India,” Debopur shares. He also appreciates the brand’s versatility; whether working on a contemporary apartment or a traditional home, its visual restraint and clean detailing adapt effortlessly, creating a quiet but lasting resonance.

For Kamalroop Singh, founder of KR Architecture Studio in Bhopal, architecture should be responsive, personal, and rooted in context. The studio’s design process evolves through an exploration of client narratives, material experimentation, and a deep understanding of site conditions. One constant, however, is their use of Fenesta fenestration systems across private residential villa projects. “To us, Fenesta creates a seamless connection between the indoors and landscaped exteriors, while delivering high performance in insulation, acoustic control, and low maintenance,” Kamalroop shares. “The fenestration plays a critical role not just functionally, but also visually — framing views, enabling openness, and contributing to the home’s energy efficiency.” Its reliable after-sales service and long-lasting quality offer clients peace of mind — a quiet assurance that endures well beyond the build.

Founded in 2016 by Shipra Singh and Rohit Parmar, Studio0522 is a Lucknow-based practice shaped by a deep belief in emotionally resonant, user-centric spaces. This human-first philosophy is reflected in their collaboration with Fenesta across several projects, including their own residence and studio. Fenesta’s slim-profile, large-span sliding and folding systems have “unlocked new possibilities,” they say. “These systems have redefined doors and windows from being functional components to becoming architectural features that shape the character of a space. By minimizing visual obstruction and maximizing openings, they create seamless indoor-outdoor flow, flood interiors with light, and enhance both ventilation and comfort, without compromising on aesthetics. We now approach fenestration not just as a technical detail, but as a design tool,” they add.

Their approach is rooted in clarity and intent. “Every decision should be well justified and good design shouldn’t shout — it should be clear,” they say. Their work balances vision and function, resulting in spaces that are mindful, intentional, and quietly elegant. Over the years, Fenesta has been their go-to for apertures across projects. “Fenesta aligns with our values. From the start, it’s been our preferred brand for its durability, low maintenance, and features like energy efficiency and hydro insulation,” they share. “These qualities not only enhance our designs but ensure they last.” For JDA Interiors, Fenesta isn’t just a product but part of the process, delivering on quality, consistency and service every time.
